

Corporate owners dictate the content and form of news coverage. The more media they own the more they control the discussion of public issues in a community. Independent views are silenced by media mergers. They set the agenda and content of the discussion. Corporate owners can place profits above journalistic standards.